

Oceanism

A belonging to the Indo-European set as the oceanism feeling for a whole and inseparable universe involves a self and primitive behaviour for a background civilization making the deontological protocol of diverse beliefs and their induction into the social life an exercise that plays with the facing adoption of the physiological procreation that devours and dedicates the birth child to a reciprocal contract with an access to reality handling through the animal instinct without language an omission of the writing thought that furthers progressive visions of an emancipated and individual safeguard.
